COLUMBUS SHOOTING

It is the Sensation of the Hour at Ohio's Capital.

FURTHER FACTS IN THE CASE

Both the Elliotts Shot Osborne, While Hughes Was Killed by a Bullet from W. J. Elliott's Revolver

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 25.—The awful tragedy of Monday, in which W. L. Hughes and Al. C. Osborne lost their lives and five men were wounded, is the sole topic of conversation on the streets, in the hotel lobbies and in the saloons. While a few, who always have an "I told you so" story after an event of this character, now confidently state that they knew the newspaper war between The World and Capital would end in bloodshed, still the prevailing opinion all along has been that the main fight would be made through the respective newspapers.

Osborne, however, seemed to have a premonition of his impending fate. Monday morning he was down town, armed and watchful. He was also very nervous, and would start and glance over his shoulder at any unusual sound. He had heard reports that Bill Elliott was hunting him Sunday morning and laughing nervously said that Bill "knew where to find him if he wanted him very badly." After leaving Bob's saloon and restaurant, where Leveining took dinner, he walked back to Schrader's. He was so nervous that Squire McDonald advised him to take something to brace him up. He did so and stepped from the door. He had not been gone five minutes when the shooting occurred.

The United Press yesterday met a young man, J. W. Lincoln, who was an intimate friend of Al. Osborne, and from him learned that the deceased had momentarily expected death, and had made a final disposition of his possessions. On last week he made his will, and had spoken to this young man as to how he wished his remains cared for. "For," said he, when reproved for his levity, "I expect trouble with the Elliotts if we meet, though I cannot say just what kind." He ordered that this young man take his body from the coroner as soon as through with it, and have it placed in charge of Tom Doan, the undertaker—who by the way was Osborne's friend, and until a year ago, foreman on The Capital. He further desired that his body be taken to the home of his sister, Mrs. Mason, and that later they be given interment at Reynoldsburg.

This conversation between Lincoln and Osborne took place last week. They again met Monday noon near Schrader's saloon, just after Osborne had been weighed on the scales and measured. Lincoln addressed him as follows: "Al, I guess we had better put that casket which we had for you back in its place, for you don't seem to need it." Osborne immediately answered: "This is straight goods and no joking. The day is not over, and I may need the coffin before night." With that the two parted.

There was a good deal of talk on the street yesterday regarding the course pursued by the police in not locking the two murderers in cells as soon as arrested. Chief Murphy was asked why this was not done. Said he: "I did not lock the Elliotts up for two reasons. First, the attorneys, reputable men at the bar, requested that they be taken to my office so that a consultation might be held, and second, I wished the reporters to secure all the facts and statements they could about the affair. I have often done this and would do it for any body if so requested in a case of this kind."

The police have established beyond a doubt that Bill Elliott fired the first shot and they think that both the Elliotts shot Osborne. It is impossible to see the prisoners without an order from the chief, this being given should any one have important business with the men. The outside and inside doors are locked so as to prevent trouble should a mob organize, as there have been threats of so doing.

At 10 o'clock yesterday the coroner, with Drs. Frank Warner, B. F. Wilson and J. F. Baldwin, began a postmortem examination upon the bodies of Editor Osborne and old man Hughes. It was shown that the bullet Osborne received in the head was from the revolver used by W. J. Elliott, and the one through his lungs from the revolver of his brother Patrick. It was also shown that the bullet which killed Mr. Hughes was from W. J. Elliott's revolver.

Clarence Reed, a young man living near Elliott's home at Arlington, says that Elliott was practicing with his pistol Monday morning. He saw him, he says, shooting at a target. At the conclusion of the practice he got into his buggy and drove toward the city.

Ed. Osborne has filed an affidavit against W. J. and P. J. Elliott, charging them jointly with murder in the first degree in the killing of A. C. Osborne. The alibi is the present mayor of Reynoldsburg and a brother of the deceased. He says he proposes to push the prosecution. In addition to Mr. Huling an array of distinguished and able lawyers will be employed to prosecute the case.

An appeal will be prayed at once.

MR. WILSON DEAD.

Mr. Wilson, one of Her Representatives in the House of Congress.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—Senator E. K. Wilson, of Maryland, died here last night at 10:00 in his apartment at the Hamilton House, of heart disease, in his 70th year. Mr. Wilson was in his seat in the senate chamber last Saturday apparently in good health, and the news of his death came as a shock to the community. He complained on Sunday and Monday, but his condition was not regarded as serious until late Monday night, when he had a sinking spell, but he revived, and Tuesday morning was then thought to be out of danger. Later in the day he grew worse and hovered between life and death until about 10 o'clock at night, when the end came.

Alfrain E. Wilson ranked with the Bayards and Adamses among our few legislative legislators. His father was long a lawmaker, serving in the house of representatives of the Twentieth and Twenty-first congress, and the son has been almost continuously in office for over forty years. He was born at Snow Hill, Md., Dec. 22, 1821. After an academy course he entered Jefferson college, Pennsylvania, where he was graduated in 1841. Soon after he was admitted to the bar. In 1847 he was elected to the Maryland legislature, in 1852 was an elector on the Pierce and King ticket, served in the National Congress for the term of 1853-55 and has filled other offices. He was chosen to the United States senate in 1885, and was re-elected for the term to end in 1897.

Sparks from the burning building set fire to the lumber sheds of Edwards & Stevens across the river and the flames from this place were communicated to adjoining buildings. The loss in the village of Winooski is $30,000.

BUSINESS HOUSES DESTROYED.

EDINA, Mo., Feb. 25.—A disastrous fire yesterday destroyed nearly the entire business portion of the town, causing a loss of $100,000. THE M'KINLEY BILL.

Judge Blodgett Renders a Decision in the Marshall Field Case.

CHICAGO, Feb. 25.—Judge Blodgett decided the case of Marshall Field & Company against John M. Clark, collector of customs, involving the validity of the McKinley bill. He said:

"The best disposition the court can make of the matter is to affirm the decision of the appraisers at New York and allow the case to go directly to the supreme court. I will say, however, that the court was much impressed with the chain of reason advanced by the appellant and it might be difficult for the argument to be met by the other side. However, the McKinley bill has become the operating mechanism by which the government collects its duties and an adverse decision in this case might seriously disarrange the existing arrangement of this service. There should be a finding of facts that this court found the case of sufficient importance to warrant an appeal to the supreme court."

An appeal will be prayed at once.

SUIT AGAINST A RAILROAD.

A Number of Cars Attacked on the Toledo and Hocking Valley Line.

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 25.—Fletcher and Churchman, bankers, yesterday filed suit in attachments against the Toledo and Hocking Valley Railroad company, and several of the company's cars were stopped here and are now in the hands of the sheriff. Writs have been sent to the northern part of the state and it is the purpose to stop every car belonging to the company that can be caught in the state.

The banks claims that the company is indebted to it in the sum of $140,000 under a contract with the defunct Indianapolis car works, the bank having cashed the company's paper, then in the hands of Millard. The steps taken yesterday were for the purpose of forcing the company to defend the suit in this state.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—When the nomination of ex-Governor Foster, of Ohio, to be secretary of the treasury, with the favorable recommendation of the finance committee was read in the secret session of the senate yesterday, a western senator said that in preventing immediate consideration of the nomination Monday by having it referred to the committee, the usual custom, he had acted at the request of a senator, who seemed to have some reason for not wanting immediate action. He had no further objection to make, and would not have made objection on Monday had he not been requested to do so. The nomination was then confirmed.

The Central Pacific is the only line running on time. The greatest damage was done in southern California and Arizona. In Soledad canon, near Los Angeles, the entire track was swept out for 200 feet. More than a dozen bridges are gone near Los Angeles.

On the Atlantic and Pacific washouts are very bad and several bridges are gone. On the Colorado desert the Southern Pacific has sustained heavy damage. On Lytle creek, near San Bernardino, the water rose so rapidly last night that all the ranches fled to the city, bringing only a few of their most valuable articles. THE COKERS' STRIKE.

A Counter Between Strikers and Non-Strikers Narrowly Averted.

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz., Feb. 24.—A conflict between the strikers and non-strikers at the coke plants near Dawson was narrowly averted yesterday. A crowd of 700 strikers came down to get the men in the Frost Hill, Pauli, and Rainey plants to stop work. Many of the strikers in liquor and most of them were armed. The employees at work at the mines fled precipitately upon the approach of the mob. No actual conflict occurred.

The Frost Hill and Pauli plants of W. J. Rainey are still running. The works are heavily guarded by Pinkerton men.

How the Pension Office is Run.

Pension Commissioner Raum, acting under orders from Secretary Noble, recently issued a notice stating that "any attorney or agent who claims that he has special advantages over others prosecuting in this office makes a statement that is without foundation and simply for the purpose of securing business. He also gave notice that "no attorney or agent has a right to examine the papers in a pension claim in the office in which he is not an attorney."

Now, Mr. Raum has two sons, one of them his Chief Clerk and the other (John) a pension attorney, and appearances are mighty deceiving if the two are not running the office for all there is in it. Commenting on the above notice and some recent developments the National Democrat says:

"When he prints his father's name on his own letter heads, or solicits pension business on his father's letter paper he undoubtedly does it for the purpose of seeming business; but we are disposed to acquit the thrifty son of a more thrifty father of soliciting business under false pretenses; it is not a fact, as John Raum wishes it to be supposed, that he has special advantages over others prosecuting in this (the Pension) office, which advantages consist in his being the son of the Commissioner and the brother of the assistant chief clerk. As testimony bearing on this point take the following from the New York Herald a few days ago:

"The intended victim is a soldier's widow in a destitute condition. She applied for a pension recently under the dependent pension act, passed by Congress last July.

"Her case was taken up by a gentleman who wrote to the Commissioner of Pensions at Washington in her behalf. Her application for a pension was duly made out and forwarded to the Commissioner.

"Thus she became her own attorney and no other agency was requisite. The miffs brought to the friend of the petitioner a communication from John Raum, a son of General Green Raum, the Commissioner of Pensions. It requested that the soldier's widow should sign the power of attorney and return it to him and her name would be put on the special list, which is designed to accelerate the claims of the dependent and needy among the applicants.

"The letter from John Raum, who is a regular pension agent," said Almoner Jackson, "was addressed to another party and I wasn't able enough to hold it, but in a day or two I may be able to learn more about it.

"The agent offered for the legal fee of $10 to collect her claim upon her return of the power of attorney. I told the woman not to do anything of the kind, not to be shanghaied into sending my money. Why should she give that money to anybody for writing her name? If she is allowed the pension, why she needs it all. As for getting the name on the special list for poor and needy dependents, I do that without any outside assistance, and without expense to her.

"I do not know how Agent Raum found out about the widow's application. Of course, I have nothing to do with that end of the matter."

"Neither do we know," observes the Democrat, "how Agent Raum found out about the widow's application, but with a father in the Commissioner's office and a brother in the chief clerk's office, we can readily understand why he is able to get information that other claim agents are unable to get. We should, however, like to know whether Father Raum holds back certificates until Son Raum has had a chance of extorting $10 for no service at all. And yet Raum seems to be about the sort of man President Harrison likes."

As we remarked at the start, appearances are mighty deceiving if this precious trio are not working the pension office for all in sight. There are thousands of cases and it looks like John Raum has a bonanza. And the President winks at such doings as are detailed above.

The Pension office seems to be a private snap for Raum and sons.

HON. C. M. CLAY, JR., an aspirant for Gubernatorial honors, says he is neither "a sub-treasury candidate," nor "a farmers' candidate," but a straight-out Democrat. This is a little more to the point than his talk a week or so ago.

THERE were 1,123,805 children of school age in Ohio last year and the average expenditure for school purposes amounted to $3.10 for each person in the State. There were 25,150 teachers employed in the common schools and their salaries ranged from $27 a month in elementary schools to $80 a month in high schools. Kentucky teachers fare about as well as the Buckeyes in point of salaries received.

THE National Democrat sifts the matter down to a fine point in the following. It says: "The Democratic party will give the country real reciprocity in commerce and not a sham; it will give every man a chance, and not give one man a chance at the expense of another, and will make it possible for American ship owners to do a profitable business, instead of hiring them with public money to do an unprofitable business."

"ALLEGED CRUELTY."

A Card From Superintendent Ryan, of the Infirmary, Concerning an Article in the Republican.

Editor Bulletin: I notice in the last issue of the Maysville Republican an article headed "Alleged Cruelty," which in some respects is calculated to do me injustice, and is certain to be widely circulated and grossly exaggerated by those malicious people who have personal reasons for desiring to complain of my management as Superintendent of our noble charity, the Mason County Infirmary. It is an institution of which our county may well be proud, and I myself feel a conscientious sense of duty well done in every respect since I have administered the very delicate and responsible trust which the Magistrates of Mason County honored me by placing in my hands. I recognize the fullest right of newspapers and of citizens to fully examine and freely comment upon my whole conduct in every way as a public official. And I freely challenge the most perfect investigation and scrutiny, not only upon the part of the Board of Examiners, but all and any citizens of the county, especially those who have friends or relatives confided to my official care. I have myself solicited an examination on the part of the Board of Directors of any reports concerning my conduct to the inmates of the infirmary. It is right hard, however, to be judged by the common gossip and scandal which must necessarily be expected from the lips of refractory inmates of such an institution and those who encourage and abet them. Meanwhile I only ask a suspension of judgment until an exhaustive investigation is had and a report made, and that until this is done neither the press or people should engage in the promiscuous circulation of anonymous and irresponsible gossip about my management of the institution—myself or my family in connection therewith—and that if I am in anywise to blame, some responsible party should take it in hands and make definite charges against me. Meanwhile I confidently refer to all officers connected with the institution, the directors, the employees, the inmates, to the ministers of the Gospel who hold services there and to all who have ever visited the place during my superintendency—especially the kind ladies who have contributed to the comfort of the inmates—and I invite any and all to visit the place and examine for themselves whenever their convenience suits them. Respectfully,

JOHN RYAN,
Superintendent Mason County Infirmary.

If you have any money you had better keep it at home, or at least steer clear of "boom" cities. The simple fact of the matter is, this "boom" business has been overdone, and the collapse that will soon take place will leave many a fellow poorer, but, we trust, much wiser.

H. M. Carpenter, of Bourbon County, returned this week from Rockwood and Cardiff, Tenn., and he says the latter place is the deadliest on earth. He reports Rockwood little better.

Another party who has been down there told a similar story to a gentleman of this city.

Of course, there are exceptions to all rules, and there may be a few cities down there where investments might pay. But the safe plan is to keep your money at home and place it in some legitimate business. There is something to build on here, and several manufacturing industries heretofore alluded to would prove profitable from the start.

LAST November, Charles Page, Democratic candidate for Congress in one of the districts in Rhode Island, received a plurality only over his Republican opponent, and there was no election. A special vote to fill the vacancy was ordered and it resulted in a majority of nearly 6,000 for the Democrats. The Republicans are beginning to admit at last that "Little Rhody" is a doubtful State.

SEVERAL years ago Chamberlain & Co., of Des Moines, Iowa, commenced the manufacture of cough syrup, believing it to be the most prompt and reliable preparation yet produced for coughs, colds and croup; that the public appreciate true merit, and in time it was certain to become popular. Their most sanguine hopes have been more than realized. Over three hundred thousand bottles of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy are now sold each year, and it is recognized as "the best made," where ever known. It will cure a severe cold in less time than any other treatment. For sale by Power & Reynolds, druggists.

STORY OF AN EBONY CASKET.

It Contains a Document That Means a Good Deal to One Married Couple.

In the dressing room of a happy married woman who lives in a Madison avenue mansion there stands in a conspicuous corner a small ebony casket with silver trimmings. It is locked and has not been opened for ten years. Few know its history, which is one full of romance and also of food for reflection for those on whom the marriage vow bears heavily.

A little over ten years ago the occupants of this home were married. The wife had been brought up in a luxurious home and was a member of gay social circles. The husband was equally rich in worldly possessions, but with no liking for the round of society's pleasures. His young bachelorhood had been passed in independent club life and the sober enjoyment of his books and pictures, for which he had a strong taste. The honeymoon was barely over before a speck of discontent appeared on the horizon of their lives. It grew rapidly and soon obscured the sun of their wedded happiness. They mutually fretted under the strain of the marriage bonds. He disliked to be dragged to receptions and balls, and she chafed over his library inclinations and wanted to keep the house gay with guests and incessant going and coming.

At last the explosion came, and after a full and free discussion it was mutually agreed that they should separate. As there were no legal grounds of divorce in this state they journeyed together beyond the Ohio and consulted counsel. The laws of the west would give what each wanted—a decree. They remained away long enough to acquire statutory residence and on a certain day a decree was duly granted severing the marital chains. The lawyers in handing each a copy of the decree explained to them that, although granted by the court, it would not take effect and was so much waste paper until entered and filed in the clerk's office of the county where the court was held.

The lawyers' fees were paid and each took the parchment. Both felt free and independent, but each hesitated to put the final seal to the transaction. By a common decision arrived at separately it was settled to return to New York, whence the decree could be mailed for proper filing.

The return trip was on the same train, the friend of the petitioner a communication from John Raum, a son of General Green Raum, the Commissioner of Pensions. It requested that the soldier's widow should sign the power of attorney and return it to him and her name would be put on the special list, which is designed to accelerate the claims of the dependent and needy among the applicants.

The separation never took place. The decree was locked in the casket, to which each carried a key. At first the casket stood in the husband's library, but as years went on occasional questions about it became irksome. It was sent up stairs to the wife's room, who in her turn tired of it, and it was tucked in a corner of the dressing room. But it still exists, and there are those who will say that it holds in its possibilities of freedom the unalloyed happiness of that home.—Her Point of View in New York Times.

A Man with a Pet Whale.

On a small island in the middle of the South Pacific lives a planter, the only white man on the island—which is full of brown skinned folk—who cuts and dries the meat of coconut, which he sells to trading vessels. When any stranger stops at his island he gives him of the best that the island affords. He will get up great concerts and dances of the Islanders, above all he will take them out to see his pet, which is perhaps the largest and oldest animal that was ever petted by any man. The pet is a sperm whale nearly seventy feet long. He came through the narrow entrance into the little harbor, which is walled in by a coral reef, when quite small, and remained until he had grown so large that he could not get out if he wanted to. The great creature comes up to be fed when the planter blows his horn, and after his meal of a barrel of chopped meat or fish, performs some wonders and amusing tricks, apparently knowing what is expected of him.—Sheffield Telegraph.

Daneling.

From time immemorial dancing has formed one of the chief amusements of mankind. Repeated mention is made of it in Holy Writ, and among the ancient Egyptians it constituted a very prominent and popular religious rite. Without a doubt the Israelites gained their knowledge of it during the days of their captivity in the land of the Pharaohs. The Greeks of the olden time indulged in dances, chief among which was one that became famous under the name of the Pyrrhic dance. In this the dancers depicted the actions of a warrior engaged in doing battle, the quick and agile movements being made to the accompaniment of a flute. There were, we are told, 200 different dances in vogue among these Greeks. In ancient Rome dancing was one of the chief features of the magnificent fêtes for which the empire became so famous.—Detroit Free Press.

Did They?

There is nothing much more distressing than an unfinished story. A number of people in a London drawing room were conversing about capital punishment when a lady remarked:

"How strange it must seem to be sentenced to death!"

"Not so very, very strange, I assure you. I was myself once condemned to death in Africa," said a returned African explorer.

"Indeed!" exclaimed the lady. "And were you—did they?"

"Did they what, madam?"

"Why, did they execute you, you know?"

St. LOUIS, Feb. 25.—President Von der Ahe, in an interview, gives the make-up of the St. Louis Browns as follows: Boyle, Munyan and another man yet unsigned, catchers; Stivets, Neal King, pitchers; Conroy, Egan and Lyons, on the bases; McAleer, Hoy and McCarthy, at the field, and Fuller at short.

Large sleeves of net will be worn in silk dresses, with a tablier of the same for the skirt, and a pretty drapery of it from the shoulders to the point of the bodice.

Many of the new basques show a change from the general fashion of invisible fastenings, and button down the immediate front, the button holes edged with cording like that on the basque or slashed hip pieces. The popular spring basque consists of a very long seamed round waist, to which, in an arching seam, are applied two or three basques on Louis XIV. hip pieces. These basques are not lined with crinoline, but merely faced underside with surah or silk and trimmed with passementerie, braiding or cording, and expensive buttons.

DEATH OF M. B. MCKRELL.

He Passed Away Last Evening After a Lingering Illness from Pneumonia

The dark Angel of Death has been busy in this city and vicinity the past few days, and another one of Maysville's citizens was called away last evening.

Mr. M. B. McKrell, the dry goods merchant, breathed his last at a quarter to seven o'clock, at his rooms on Sutton street. He was taken down a few weeks ago with an attack of the "grip" which developed later on in a severe case of pneumonia. A week or more since his condition became very critical and his physicians and relatives realized then that there were but slight hopes of recovery. He lingered until last evening when the end came at the hour named. Mordicay Burgess McKrell was forty years of age last Sunday. He was born at Maysville, and was the son of James McKrell, who crossed "the dark river" several years ago.

The mother of the deceased survives him, her home at present being in Cincinnati. He leaves seven sisters, among them, Miss Mollie McKrell and Mrs. J. W. Evans, of Ripley; Mrs. J. H. Fillmore, of Cincinnati and Mrs. Ballard, of Anderson, Ind. Another sister is the wife of a merchant at Memphis, and the two others reside at Los Angeles, Cal.

Deceased spent most of his life in this city. For several years he had been engaged in the dry goods business. Of a clever and kind-hearted disposition, he won a wide circle of friends who will sincerely regret to learn the sad news of his death. His remains will be taken to Maysville to-morrow, leaving here at 10 a. m., and laid to rest by the side of those of his father. The funeral services will be held in Maysville Christian Church and will be conducted by Rev. C. S. Lucas.

ANOTHER DEATH.

Lewisburg Loses One of Her Prominent Citizens in the Person of Mark Brannon

Mr. Mark Brannon, whose critical illness was noticed some days ago, died last evening at 7:30 o'clock at his home near Lewisburg. He had been suffering several weeks from some disease of the kidneys.

Deceased was forty-one years of age, and spent his life in the vicinity where he died. In his death, Lewisburg presents loses one of her most successful farmers and stockmen. He was a good citizen and will be missed in that neighborhood. His father died a year or so ago, but his mother, four brothers—John, Thomas, James and Michael—and two sisters—Mrs. Patrick Collins and Mrs. Michael Cain—survive him.

The funeral services will be held tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock at St. Patrick's Church. Burial at Washington.

Railroad News.

Superintendent L. Hood, General Freight Agent Brent Arnold, Master Mechanic L. R. Tugge and Roadmaster W. J. Wash, all of the K. C., were here on the pay-car on its monthly trip.

The report got out a few days ago that the new owners of the Kentucky Central had discriminated against Maysville in arranging its freight rates. It was said that Cincinnati and Louisville could actually put goods in Carlisle and Millersburg cheaper than could be done by Maysville. This had a tendency to make our merchants red hot, and they were not to be blamed for getting mad. But it turned out that there was no truth in the report. Instead of being higher, the rates are really lower than under the old card.

THE funeral of Miss Maggie Collins takes place this afternoon at two o'clock, after which the remains will be interred at Washington. She was a niece of Mrs. John Gleason of East Second street.

ONE of the largest sales of real estate ever made in this city will be held Thursday, March 5th, at which time all the property of Frank W. Armstrong will be sold at public auction. It consists of that large vacant lot just east of the residence of W. H. Cox, extending from Second to Third, fronting on Second about 66 feet and on Third 150 feet; also the house in the "Brick Row" on Third occupied by Judge Thomas R. Phister; also the large lot and brick residence on northwest corner of Third and Sutton and the block of buildings north of same on Sutton street. All this property is located in the most central and desirable part of the city. It is sold by decree of court for investment of its proceeds in property in another city, where Mr. Armstrong resides, and the title of the purchaser will be perfect. It will be sold on usual time and in lots to suit purchasers.

Advertisers and Advertising.

Franklin said: "If a man can do business he should let it be known." Modern commercial history has shown that a man can not do business unless he does "let it be known." The newspapers are full of instances of men who "let it be known" and do business. The bankrupt courts are full of instances of men who failed to "let it be known" and failed to do business.

"Vox populi, vox dei." The best daily newspaper is "the voice of the people" the world over. If you want to sound your advertising the world over, use the voice of the people. Everybody that reads a magazine reads a daily newspaper. Hundreds of thousands of people who read the daily newspapers never see a magazine of any kind. Magazine advertising that's worth having is the highest-priced in the world; newspaper advertising, for intrinsic value, is the cheapest.
